WASHINGTON (AP) Physicists in Houston and Ala-bama have achieved a breakthrough in superconductivity research that points to dramati-cally more efficient and cheaper electrical power, the govern-

Washington Past Service AMMAN, Jordan — Represenatives of Jordan and the Palestine Liberation Organization met here Sunday for the first time since King Hussein broke off negotiations a year ago with the guerrillas on a joint approach to peace talks with

In breaking off negotiations with Mr. Arafat on Feb. 19, 1986, Hussein said he would only deal with the PLO when Mr. Arafat agreed to accept UN Security Council Resolution 242, which implicitly recognizes Israel, and refused economic coordination limited to the Israelioccupied territories.

During the second half of last year, the king closed many PLO offices in Jordan and launched a $1.4 hillion five-year plan for West Bank development designed to re-store flagging Jordanian influence in the occupied territories at the PLO's expense.

But Hussein was forced to back down when Saudi Arabia, a major donor for both Jordan and the PLO, last month quietly paid an overdue $9.5 million final contribu-tion for 1985 to the joint committee that was set up by the Arab League

Jewish Dissident 'Is Free Now,' Soviet Aide Says

The release of Mr. Begin, the most prominent Jewish dissident in the Soviet Union since the release a year ago of Natan Sharansky, who was then known as Anatoli Shcharansky, comes after the pardoning of about 140 prisoners under two separate state decrees this month. It also comes after a series of demonstrations on behalf of Mr. Begun that resulted in increasing violence. The demonstrators were allowed to display placards unmolested for one day, then were suppressed with increasing force. After a clash Friday, one demonstrator was briefly hospitalized and another severely bruised.

His case was in the process of reassessment," Mr. Arbatov said on the broadcast. "He would have been freed several days ago would not it be for this demonstration."

Wall Street Enters the Dock

As Insider Case Taints Top Aides, System Goes on Trial

By James Sterngold w York Times Service

NEW YORK - Four top financial executives stood before a federal judge last week on insider trading charges. But it is becoming more and more evident that it is Wall Street itself, and its role in the corporate takeover boom of recent years, that is facing trial.

The venerable securities houses have been struggling against this conclusion ever since the scandal over the use of inside information to make huge profits in the market enguifed the financial world May

Sarney's Support Erodes As Brazil Economy Lags

By Alan Riding New Yark Times Service RIO DE JANEIRO — A sudden

souring of Brazil's economic situation has seriously eroded political and popular support for President José Sarney, tumbling the country into its worst crisis since civilian rule returned here two years ago. In recent weeks, the president has come under growing criticism not only from opposition groups that want to cut short his mandate. but also from two pro-government parties, which are pressing him to respond more assertively to the new economic challenge. "Sarney seems to have lost the will to govern," said a senior mem-ber of Mr. Sarney's Brazilian Democratic Movement Party, which controls Congress. "He has helped to create the crisis through indecision, and now we have a president without authority."

At the same time, just three months after a price freeze imposed by Mr. Sarney won his party a ming victory in mid-term elections, the government's failure to contain a sharp resurgence of inflation has angered voters who feel they were deceived.

"Before the election, Samey was incredibly popular," a foreign dip-lomat said. "Now, he has to avoid crowds for fear of being beckied. He's become a president who has to hide out in the palace."

Collecting Taxes in Corsica Hurts More Than Paying

By Paul Lewis New York Times Service

AJACCIO, Corsica - "Look what a tax collector in a mountain village just received!" shouted François Pacquere, a young mao with a mustache and darting black eyes. Sitting in a tax office here, he waved a letter signed by Joseph Duplouy, chief treasurer of northern Corsica, demanding that the unfortunate tax collector come up with 771,956 francs and 63 centimes (about $127,000) out of his own pocket to make up for taxes he failed to gather in his district. The government in Paris says it is fed up with tax evasion on this poor, mountainous Mediterranean island, famed as Napoleon's hirthplace. To try to increase revenues, the government plans to make the collectors on Corsica, which has been a part of France since 1768, pay what they fail to extract from

The harassed tax collectors, or "percepteurs," say they cannot do better. They say they are op against Corsican society, where whole villages are filled with people who share the same last name and a farm may be owned by more than a hundred people, many of whom have left the island.

"There's a massive conspiracy against us," Mr. Pacquere said. "Everybody is in it. The village mayors mislead us. The postmen don't deliver letters. And we've had six bomb attacks on this office. This society is rotten right through, and we're being made to pay

The decision was made Tuesday at a meeting with his arms control advisors called to consider a proposal by Secretary of Defense Caspar W. Weinberger to follow a "broad" interpretation of the treaty, the officials said.

The list is to include a detailed description of the experiments Mr. Weinberger wants to conduct under the broad interpretation, a proposed timetable for the experiments and an assessment of their importance, the officials said.

No such list has been circulated by the Pentagon or given to the president, despite Mr. Weinberger's statement at the White House that a shift to the broad interpretation is needed so that more realistic tests can be conducted in the Stra-.. segic Defense Initiative research

At the meeting, however, the president formally authorized additional analysis of the legal instification for the broad interpretation, the officials said.

The analysis will cover the recountries and the record of subsequent "agreements between the two which bear on their understandings" of the ABM treaty, a State Department official said. The analysis will be conducted by a State Department legal adviser, Abraham D. Sofaer.

No decision has been made about the timing for the study, but one official said Friday that Mr. Sofaer would probably be given three months to complete his work, not six as Secretary of State George P. Sholtz initially proposed at a White House meeting two weeks

Officials at the State Department and the Pentagon disagree about what to tell U.S. allies during consultations on the treaty interconsultations on the treaty inter-pretation, also ordered by Mr. Res-gan at the meeting, officials said. One official predicted that U.S. arms control advisers would be sent to tell the allies that "the broad interpretation is required, and the SDI program is being restruc-tured." They would also tell them that "your views will be taken into consideration," the official said.

This approach was described as being closer to that favored by the Pentagon. Some State Department officials prefer instead that the progovernment of President Alan Garas an "option" rather than an "in-

The officials said Mr. Shultz received approval from Mr. Reagan then to make public the essence of the "talking points" in the television appearance. Mr. Shultz's announcements were described as a package with several elements:

Of all the groups in Lebanon, the two most thoroughly disinherited are the alien Palestinians, who have no home, and the Shiites, who constitute a Lebanese majority but do not have commensurate power. The PLO's military presence in southern Lebanon drew heavy Israeli fire upon the resident Shiites before Israel invaded and expelled the PLO in 1982. In the chaos of Lebanon, however, PLO forces have been returning and setting up in the few areas halfway open to them — in refugee camps around Beirut and the south. To keep the PLO from consolidating its position and drawing new Israeli fire upon the Shiites, and from aiding Lebanese rivals of the Shiites, Amal has been battling PLO forces in the "camps war." This is the context in which Amal blockaded Burj al-Brajneh.

If one could wave a wand and order all your arm. Obviously, the occasional surge ing Syria and Iran, are vying for spheres of influence, and the Lebanese are fighting including the United States, have reduced their roles to near the vanishing point.

Let us be clear, however, about one thing. The Lebanese, for all their conflicts and failings, have a place in Lebanon. The Palestinians do not. They are there involuntarily. They are unassimilable. That they are also troublesome and irresponsible does not alter the root fact that they should not be in Lebanon at all. They should be, politically, in the West Bank under terms mutually acceptable to them, the Israelis and the Jordanians. Not by a long shot can all of Lebanon's agony be blamed on the suspension of pursuit of the Palestinian question. But much of it can. The single most important thing the United States could do for Lebanon would be to focus hard again on the Israeli-Palestinian dispute.

Abandon the Wreckage

Department to evaluate policy toward South Africa offers this startling judgment: "The administration's strategy of constructive engagement has failed to achieve its objectives." Does that mean what it seems to mean? Not quite, asserts a stung State Department, because the administration has never claimed to achieve all its objectives. True, But those who trouble to read the panel's report will find a devastating attack on the six-year-old policy of trying to end apartheid by friendly persuasion.

The dozen panelists divided over whether harsh sanctions hurry the end of apartheid. Perhaps, as the State Department argues, the report fails to deal convincingly with all the numbers of race-based violence. So what? Seldom has an official panel punctured as many official myths as this one, headed by William Coleman, a former transportation secretary, and Frank Cary, once chairman of IBM.

What are America's vital interests in South Africa? For starters, the panel rejects cliches invariably invoked to justify coddling Pretoria, like the need for chromium and other strategic minerals and the security of sea-lanes around the Cape of Good Hope. "Our most fundamental interest," it declares, "is to assist in ending a political and legal system in which over 80 percent of the population are denied basic individual political rights on the basis of race alone."

Reacting against the moralism of Jimmy Carter, Ronald Reagan tried a different tack in dealing with the white minority diplomacy in place of lectures and veiled about time to abandon the wreckage. threats. It was worth a try. What happened,

A panel appointed by the Reagan State however, was that Washington routinely pepartment to evaluate policy toward exaggerated token "reforms" proffered by Pretoria. To black Africa, Ronald Reagan became an apologist for apartheid.

The panel gets it right. It recommends "against U.S. endorsement of 'reforms' that fail to address the fundamental concerns of black South Africans." It says "applause for piecemeal reforms has proven counterproductive." It argues that change must be part of a process of negotiation with the spectrum of black organizations, including the outlawed African National Congress and its jailed leader Nelson Mandela.

What about Communist domination of the ANC, a menace continually invoked by White House speechwriters? Sure, there is a problem, but Pretoria itself bears much of the blame for creating it, "By banning the ANC and closing all effective channels for peaceful political opposition, the government has created a favorable environment for a tightly organized, clandestine party with close links to external sources of arms and military training."

South Africans of all races have been confused about where America stands, Congress answered with sanctions, whose effect may be uncertain but whose message is unmistakable. To say that sanctions have not "worked" because repression is now harsher within South Africa comes with ill grace from those who once argued that U.S.

The Carter policy did not work and the Reagan administration changed it. Now the State Department's own handpicked panel says the Reagan policy has also failed. It is come sobering statements on Nicaragua that the senior political ranks of the Reagan administration do not seem to have fully absorbed into their policy thinking. Retired General Paul Gorman, former head of the command that oversees Central America, suggested recently that the administration has gone wrong in its training and arming of the contras: It has made them "a cross-border raiding force" rather than a force able to wage unconventional warfare. As a result, said General Gorman, "I don't think [the Sandinists] regard the contras as a serious threat. I think they've got the situation under control ... Unless and until we are able to launch a genuine unconventional warfare campaign, the use of that kind of military instrument is not an option that the president of the United States has." Concluded the general: "I do not see a way out of our present difficulty."

That is a remarkable indictment of the Reagan administration's record in seven years of involvement with Nicaragua.

Speaking the other day, Admiral William J. Crowe Jr., chairman of the Joint Chiefs of Staff, was more sanguine about the prospect that the resistance may yet "change the way the government of Nicaragua does its business." But he said rebel forces are now too politically divided either to threaten the government in Managua or to ensure a continued U.S. commitment. As for a possible U.S. military bailout of the contras, "the chiefs certainly would be opposed to direct U.S. involvement." Admiral Crowe said. Militarily speaking, in short, two sets of constraints work against the administration's Central America policy. The outlook for the contras is poor, and so is the possibility of U.S. relief. Given those circumstances, would it not be prudent for the administration to consider more seriously the diplomatic option to save what can be salvaged from a deteriorating situation? This option, represented by the efforts of the principal Latin democracies, has painful weaknesses. But it would align U.S. policy with friendly countries that have far more at stake. And, according to the evident consensus of senior officers, it would spare the United States the heavy burden of watching the contras collapse because they could not make their own way.

Not to Be Taken Seriously

No American commercial television production has ever come remotely close to the sustained quality of British miniseries like "Brideshead Revisited," "I, Claudius" or "Ascent of Man." What American networks do provide is elephants like "Amerika." This 14%-hour political melodrama, costing at least $40 million, tells a good deal about how ABC Entertainment regards the average viewer's intelligence.

The series supposedly shows American life in 1997, after a decade of Soviet rule through weak-kneed collaborators. The Russians have taken over, it is said, without firing a shot. How? Nobody explains, but the impression is left that instead of standing tall, Americans somehow went morally and intellectually limp in 1986, smack in the

In other words, it is very hard to take "Amerika" seriously. Hence, the United Nations is misguided to threaten a lawsuit over the program's use of UN peacekeeping emblems by Soviet occupiers. Hence, liberal critics are wrong to demand time to give the other side of the story.

"Amerika" seems designed to grab headlines and pump up ratings. It resembles docudramas about Atlanta's child murders. the kidnapping of Party Hearst or the Manson gang's cult killings. They were pseudo-sociology; "Amerika" is pseudo-politics. When the makers of this series claim some profound philosophic purpose, the appropriate response is not to sue but to sucker.

Yes, Terror — but Why Call It 'Moslem' or 'Arab'?

WASHINGTON — I am perturbed by the tendency to use the simplistic equation "Moslem-terrorist-Arab." There are almost 200 million Arabs and close to a billion Moslems in the world. Is it honest or fair that they be blanthe world. Is it nonest or lair that they be blain keted with the "terrorist" label through the indiscriminate use of an identifying "Moslem" or "Arab" adjective in media coverage of terrorist actions emmating from the Middle East?

Journalists who pride themselves on objective themselves on objective themselves are the descriptions.

reporting are curiously selective in their descriptions. They never make reference to the Baader-Meinhof gang as "Christian terrorist." The Japanese Red Army Faction is never called "Shinto terrorist." The obliteration of camps and towns in Lebanon is not called "Jewish terrorism."

Reports from Lebanon invariably include reference to "Moslem West Beirut," as if religion were responsible for the anarchy there. Berrut, until 1975, was a thriving cosmopolitan city, noted for the harmonious coexistence of Christian and Moslem quarters. And West Beirut was always a mixture of Moslems and Christians living side by side; it still is. The Moslems who live there have suffered no less from the violence and terror than have the Christians.

The present Israeli prime minister and at least one of his predecessors were adept practitioners of terrorism four decades ago. Today many of those reasonably referred to as "terrorists" in the Middle East are Christians; others are Jews.

By Mohamed Kamal The writer is Jordan's ambassador to the United States.

Certainly there are Moslems who are terrorists, but do the words "Arab" and "Moslem" have to but its different words. Also and meeter the attached immutably to the word "terrorist"?

This offends honesty and fair play, and is contrary to the ethical norms of journalistic practice. The press would not think of writing "black thief" or "Christian murderer." Why then does a thief" or "Christian murderer." Why then does a qualifying racial or religious adjective become acceptable when it is "Arab" or "Moslem"?

This damaging practice of discrimination projects a strong echo of racism and religious bias, which is causing a great deal of bitterness and resentment among Arabs and Moslems. More important, it breeds among Americans a baseless but threatening antagonism toward all Arabs and Moslems, even those who have lived in America for generations as U.S. citizens.

It is difficult to believe that this practice exists

It is difficult to believe that this practice exists because of irresponsible editorial oversight. One is forced to ask: Could it be a premeditated plan to promote hatred of Moslems and Arabs and feed the fires of fanaticism and religious conflict?

Terrorism and its disturbing linkage to Islam were among the concerns expressed by the many heads of state who attended the fifth Islamic summit conference, held in Kuwait recently. In his address to the conference, King Hussein of Jordan reflected this latter concern by saying: "Many efforts are being made to weaken the Moslems by feeding their internal conflicts and internationalizing their problems. We are witnessing today a carefully concerted campaign to tarnish our Islamic image by linking Islam to acts of terrorism carried out by certain individuals and groups. Islam, our religion, abhors such acts. Islam, in which the preservation of life is a basic principle, prohibits any unlawful killing. We do not hear terrorist acts being attributed to the religion of their perpetrators except in the case of Arabs and Moslems. Why? Because the enemies of Arabs and Moslems find in acts of terror an easy means to distort our image and isolate us, to justify their acts of aggres-sion, perpetuate their hegemony and carry out their expansionist policies." American media apparently found it convement to ignore a resolution at the Islamic summit. that unanimously condemned terrorism in any form as contrary to the teachings of Islam, Such a failure is but another form of the discrimination that I have defined here. Ethnic origin and religious affiliation do not carry built-in genes of criminal impulse. To try to create such an impression can eventually defeat mankind's pursuit of the peace and brotherhood that all religions embrace, including Islam.

'Amerika' Is Irresponsible, Dangerous Television a politically damaged Ronald Resgan or even his successor may find it difficult to call on Israeli operatives AMBRIDGE, Massachusetts --The television minimakes called "Amerika," depicting the United States in 1997 after 10 years of Soviet occupation, raises profound ques-tions about the responsibilities of the mass media in the nuclear age.

"Amerika" seems likely to provoke fear and hatred of the Soviet Union, yet Donald Wrye, the writer, has denied that it has to do with Soviet-American relations at all. At a forum, he called it "just an entertainment." In fact, in "Amerika" the Soviet Union has blown up the Capitol and massacred most of Congress, and sin-ister Soviet-controlled United Nations units, led by a psychopathic East German, rape and kill Ameri-

The creators have indused in familiar Russian-Nazi sterootypes (the images seem to be merged), most malignant of which is the idea that the Kremlin's purpose is to crush all in-dependent thinking and bring about "the final solution to the American problem," as the script says.

Television is the principal source of information for many Americans, Soviet-American relations. Whether

"Amerika" should be shown in the Soviet Union was hotly debated during a conference in Moscow that I at tended last month. The subject was "The Psychology of Enemy vs. Part-nership Images." Some argued, in the spirit of a new openness, that nothing should be withheld from the Soviet people, and trusted their ability to see the series in a balanced perspective. Others feared that "Amerika" would inflame anti-American attitudes at a time when serious efforts are being made to increase contact and reduce tension between the two countries. A Soviet journalist who had attended a preview of "Amerika" in Lincoln, Nebraska, wrote in a Moshateful, I silently cried in the hushed cinema: What have Russians got to do with all this? The tanks have been

The Iran operation was the strateform. Here were tight-lipped, effi-cient Israelis providing intelligence on a vital Middle Eastern country and helping run a covert operation for leak-prone, distant America.

What is often missed in viewing Israel from abroad is the strong abhorrence that many Israelis feel for any degree of dependence on an outside power, even the United States. Israel was founded out of the flames of the Holocanst as a state in which Jews would control their own destiny and never again be valuerable to the dictates of others.

A successful Iranian adventure, even with the Israeli role hidden, would have helped reduce this troubling contradiction vis-à-vis Washington. It is this, even more than the idea of providing a fair return on U.S. strategic investment, that drove the Israeli desire to "do a friend a favor" by undertaking the operation. Economic Growth Is Said to Threaten Earth's Ecology

Ukraine Aide Dismissed for Power Abuses

MOSCOW - A Communist Party official in the Ukraine has been dismissed following the unlawful arrest of a reporter who exposed abuses of power, the Ukrainian party leader said Sunday. The leader, Vladimir V. Shcherbitsky, also a member of the ruling Politburo, said in the party news-paper Pravda that Boris T. Goncharenko, party chief for the Voroshilovgrad region, bad been dismissed after "gross violations" of the law in the region.

These included the arrest on hooliganism charges of a reporter, Viktor Berkhin, in the city of Voroshilovgrad in July. It followed publication of an article in which Mr. Berkhin revealed abuses of power by the police and local officials, Mr. Shcherbitsky said.

The dismissal of Mr. Goncharenko, 60, a member of the party Central Committee in Moscow, followed the dismissal last month of A. Dichenko, a semor Ukrainian KGB security police officer, for his role in Mr. Berkhin's arrest.

Mr. Goncharenko, Voroshilovgrad party chief since December 1971, had earlier been implicated by Prayda in allowing corruption.

Mr. Shcherbitsky said in a frontpage article that several other officials, including the Voroshilovgrad party chief. O. Kotivar, and the head of the region's city council, R. sumed," the report said. "In North world product costs more than it is worth," the report said. "The scale of human activities has begun to threaten the habitability of the Earth itself."

The report was written by the institute president, Lester R. Brown, and seven colleagues. It cited recent trends in atmospheric degradation as evidence that natural systems were being pushed beyoud their capacity to adjust.

In the last two years, scientists have become increasingly concerned about a mysterious "hole" that appears each year in the Earth's protective ozone layer over

At the same time, meteorologists have confirmed a slight but trou-bling increase in global temperatures that some believe foreshadows major climate changes.

Both phenomena have been linked to airborne pollotants from industrial activity. Worldwatch said they were evidence that "the negative side-effects of this century's twenty-fold expansion of economic activity are now becoming inescapable."

According to the report, gross world product has grown from roughly $600 billion in 1900 to more than $13 trillion in 1986, an increase fueled mainly by a 12-fold increase in fossil fuel consumption.
But the rapid industrialization is exacting a price on the environ-ment, it said, and is likely to affect the economy as well.

As an example, it cited forest damage from airborne pollution in West Germany. Damage was estimated at 8 percent in 1982. By 1984, surveys showed more than 50 percent of the forest damaged or dying, a major threat to tourism and wood-products industries.

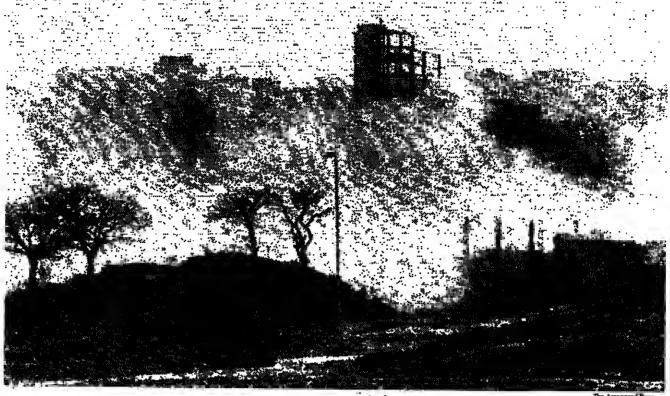

The report also questioned the future of modern agriculture, including the "green revolution" that it heralded as "the most successful achievement in international development since the Marshall Plan."

In developing countries, as in the United States, increased yields have largely stemmed from buge infusions of energy-fuel for tractors, electricity for irrigation pumps and fossil fuel-based fertil-

The report said such energy-intensive practices have put the green revolution out of reach for scores of poorer countries and are a growing threat to agriculture in better-off nations as energy supplies dimin-

Irish Supply-Siders Dominate Campaign

Economics Is Key Election Issue

By Howell Raines New York Times Service

DUBLIN - The conservative economic ideas often identified with President Ronald Reagan and Prime Minister Margaret Thatcher have become a key part of the campaign debate in the Irisb Republic this year. The center-right Progressive Democracy Party has become the main vehicle for promoting the conservative remedies as a way to overcome the nation's crushing economic ills.

But in the campaign for the election oo Tuesday, Prime Minister Garret FitzGerald and his Fine Gael party also are calling for deep speeding cuts as a prelude to lower interest rates, lower taxes and greater reliance on the private sec-

Haughey, with a reputation for being most protective of Ireland's tax-and-spend tradition. are feeling pressure to drop their opposition to an Irish version of Mrs. Thatcher's program of switching state-owned corporations to private ownership.

Because of anti-British feeling and the U.S. failure to curb its own deficit, candidates have resisted acknowledging any debt to Mrs. Thatcher or Mr. Reagan.

But party activists, political scholars and business leaders speak openly of the American and British roots of the new ecocomic thought, Some say they believe that if the Progressive Democrats succeed in establishing themselves as a "third force" in Irish politics, their borrowed economic ideas could become a major influence on the next government's policies on spending, taxation and public debt.

"They are really the supply-side party," said Monre McDowell, an conomist at University College, Dublin,

A pobtical scientist there, Richard Sinott, said the Progressive Democrats had been influenced by tered themselves indoors in Mrs. Thatcher's philosophy of less anticipation of further battles, The washington Post reported from Beirut.

That Four people were killed and 15 cberism is a bad word, and wounded in clashes between forces monetarism is a bad word," he said, "but while avoiding the labels, the substance is attractive to PDs, their leaders, candidates and activists."

The Progressive Democratic canin some of the smaller European smaller parties sharing 5 percent nations, such as Denmark.

But last week a question about his debt to the economic policies of Britain's Conservative Party apparently flustered him into an embarrassing slip of the tongue.

"Now if there are some similarines with other places, well, so be, it," Mr. O'Malley said. Mr. O'Malley's presentation of his economic agenda is strikingly similar to the classic supply-side recipe of coordinated spending and tax cuts offered by Mr. Reagan in

Healthy Stock Gains Whet Japanese Thirst for Equity

By CARL GEWIRTZ International Herald Tribune

ARIS — A flood of new issues, the heaviest so far this year, hit the international capital market last week. But ARIS underwriters' enthusiasm to generate new business far outpaced investors' willingness to make new commit-ments, leaving most of the paper trading at substantial discounts from the offering prices.

Analysts report that money available for investment is pouring mto equities rather than bonds, a pattern that is likely to continue so long as the New York, Tokyo and London stock markets remain buoyant and as bond markets remain clouded by the uncertain outlook for economic growth, inflation and interest rates and the constant seesawing of exchange rates.

This was amply demonstrated by the favorable response to the equity-linked Eurobonds. The Japanese remain the most active issuers, and with stock prices rising sharply, were able to cut the coupon on their equity warrant bonds to 3 percent from the 314 percent initially indicated. The lower coupon in effect raises the cost of the equity warrant. As a result, only two of the six Japanese issues priced last week, Keihan Electric Railway and Tokyu Department Store, ended Keihan Electric Railway and Tokyu Department Store, ended trading above the offering price.

The Japanese are also big buyers, and the latest data show a very big shift in Japanese investors' preference for foreign stocks. In December, $1.6 billion of net purchases of foreign securities were in stocks, up from $686 million the previous month. (Gross stock purchases in December totaled $3.4 billion.) To put the net figures in some perspective only $995 million was invested in figures in some perspective, only $995 million was invested in foreign stocks in all of 1985.

The best way of seeing how dramatically investor attitudes are shifting is to compare December's activity with the year's total For all of 1986, only 7 percent of net Japanese purchases of foreign securities went into equities. But in the final month, equities accounted for 15 percent of the total outflow.

PARTIAL breakdown of the figures reported in the February issue of Nomura Investment Review, covering only transactions involving securities houses situated in Japan, shows $600 million of net stock purchases in December. Only a small portion of that figure, $188 million, was identified as going into U.S. stocks. Nomura's data does not separate stock and bond purchases for other areas, but shows large inflows into Canada and Britain.

Canada and Britain.

Nomura states that "1987 will mark the first year in which Japanese institutional investors invest in foreign equities in a serious way." Nomura is advising its clients to concentrate stock buying where corporate profitability" is "benefiting from the depreciated currencies," namely North America and Britain.

British companies also were active in the equity-linked sector of the Eurobond market. Redland, Trusthouse Forte, W.H. Smith and ASDA-MFT Group, a furniture chain, tapped the market for a total of £315 million. ASDA alone borrowed a record large £120 million.

record large £120 million.

KB Ifima issued $100 million of bonds carrying warrants to buy shares of Kredietbank of Belgium and Groupe Videotron offered 25 million Canadian dollars of bonds convertible into

The thirst for equity is reflected in the hefty premiums investors are asked to pay for these bonds bearing stock options. In almost all the issues, this premium amounts to about 30 percent. The premium is composed of two elements: the below-normal on on the bond and the exercise price to buy the stock.

KB Ifima, for example, set the coupon on its seven-year bond at 4½ percent. That paper, offered at par value of 100, would have to drop 20 percent to a price of 80 if there were no equity kicker to bring the yield to just over 84 percent, the level it would be expected to pay if it issued ordinary debt.

At the same time, the four-year option to buy its stock is fixed at a price 10 percent above the current quote. When that is added to the 20-percent give-up in coupon value, the real premium investors pay for the stock option to 30 percent.

In most cases, this cost is not spelled out but clearly implied. In a few issues, the price was stated. Trusthouse Forte, for example, set a coupon of 10% percent on its five-year issue offered at 119, meaning investors were asked to pay £1,190 for paper that will be redeemed at £1,000. Added to that 19 percent premium is the 8 percent surcharge above the prevailing London Stock Exchange quote to buy the shares, a total premium of 27 percent.

There was no such effervescence in the straight bond market. In the dollar sector, bankers reported very little demand and this was concentrated on short-dated paper: IBM'a 6% percent three-year notes priced to yield 17 basis points, or 0.17 percent, over the yield of comparably dated Treasury notes and Morgan Guaran-

Spain Rescuing FECSA

Asks Creditors To Defer Interest

MADRID — As part of a rescue package, Spain will ask foreign banks to accept postponement of interest payments on almost 200 billion pesetas ($1.56 billion) of loans to its FECSA power company and seek "minor" debt cancellations, according to a government

"We are going to ask sacrifices of shareholders, the electrical industry and financial creditors to rescue FECSA," the spokesman said Friday.

He said the government would not provide cash but would help work out a restructuring plan. Electrical industry sources said FECSA's problems arose partly because it had raised costly loans to finance nuclear power stations.

The Madrid stock exchange decided on Friday to suspend trading in FECSA shares.

"Negotiations between FECSA and its creditors will begin next week and we expect a solution within two months," the govern-ment spokesman said.

FECSA, which provides power throughout the Catalonia region and in parts of Aragon, in northern Spain, appointed Luis Magana, a leading energy expert, on Friday as chairman to replace Juan Alegre Marret

He will negotiate a restructuring plan with FECSA's creditors, about 100 local and foreign banks The spokesman said FECSA was an isolated case and Spain's 20 other power companies were able to meet their combined 3,600 billion peseta deht with their own capital A U.S. banker said: "The gov-

Indonesia Gripped by Gold Fever

Fortune Seekers, Legal and Illegal, Rush to Jungles international mining companies as well as thousands of poachers and other fortune seekers. The territory was headhunter country in the first half of this century, and the Borneo jungles still pose formidable challenges to men and machines.

Beyond the difficulty of reaching the gold, there are differences of opinion about the potential yield from the find. Some geologists and engineers think Indonesia could become one of the world's top gold producers in a decade. Others are more can-

Like all gold rush stories, this one involves "a lot of romance, a lot of bope," said Mark H. Miller, vice president for devel-opment of Duval Corp. of Indo-oesia, a subsidiary of Pennzoil

Nevertheless, the Penuzoil unit is involved in two major exploration areas, including numerous sites around Mandor, 50 miles (about 80 kilometers) north of the city of Pontianak in the province of West Kalimantan. It is not alone: 34 mining contracts were signed in Jakarta in December with international companies and another 76 applications are being processed by the government. Almost all involve gold, mining companies

Further, the companies say that poschers in Central Kali-mantan, operating illegally around still-unworked Austra-lian, American and British concessions near Mount Muro, are hauling away a ton of gold a month, using homemade equipment they construct on the spot or float into the wilderness hy river. The gold is reportedly smuggled out to Hong Kong through the port of Banjermasin,

Airbus Rolls Out A-320, Confirms Lufthansa Order

TOULOUSE, France - In an elaborate display of European soli-darity, Airbus Industrie has unveiled the latest addition to the range of aircraft with which it hopes to secure a major place in the world commercial jet market.

The Airbus president, John Pierson, used the roll-out Saturday of the Airbus A-320 to announce that the West German airline Lufthansa AG had signed a contract for 30 Airbus A-340 long-range planes, a project Airbus hopes to launch next month. A tentative agreement had already been announced.

The roll-out came against a background of acrimonious exchanges between the United States and the four Airbus partoers, France, Britain, West Germany and Spain, over what the United States contends are unfair subsidies to the Airbus consortium.

But the U.S. cabinet decided Fri-day against retaliation over the Air-bus and ruled that the dispute be handled within the General Agree-ment on Tariffs and Trade, the international framework for trade re-

China Extends Bank Reforms To 14 Cities

The Associated Press

BELJING - China has extended its experiment in giving more autonomy to local banks and developing money markets to 14 more cities, the official news agency Xinhua reported

Sunday.

The oewly designated cities, which include Beijing, Shanghai, Tianjin, Harbin and Xian, bring the total number involved in the experiment to 27.

Bank branches involved in the experiment are being given more decision-making powers with the eventual goal of turning them into enterprises responsible for their own losses and profits, Xinhua said.

The banks will have the right to handle their credit funds independently, introduce new husiness services, adjust interest rates within a 20 percent limit, appoint and remove managers, set up new places of business and decide on staff wages,

Hersant Favored to Win TV Channel French Publisher's Unlikely Alliance Is Key to Likely Success

By Julian Nundy memational Herold Tribune

PARIS -- Robert Hersant, the controversial rightist publisher of Le Figaro newspaper, appears cer-tain to gain control of France's fifth television channel, according to media analysts. Mr. Hersant heads a consortium that was one of two groups to place a bid last Tuesday for the commercial, light entertainment channel, La Cinq, whose license will be reat-tributed this month. The other is headed by Sir James Goldsmith, the flamboyant Anglo-French financier. His principal as-sociate is David de Rothschild of the banking family.

But Mr. Hersant's associates are the key to his likely success. They are Silvio Berlusconi and Jérôme Seydoux, La Cinq's current operators, who hold 25 and 10 percent, respectively, of the consor-tium. Mr. Hersant has a 25 percent

A year ago, when Le Cinq first started broadcasting, the attribu-tion of a license to the team headed by Mr. Berlusconi, an Italian commercial television operator, created a political storm.

Critics, foremost among them commentators on Mr. Hersant's Le Figaro, accused President François Mitterrand of arranging favors for cronies in advance of elections last March that his Socialist Party was destined to lose. The right pledged to throw the decision back to the National Commission for Communication and Liberties that it set up to oversee

The unlikely Hersant-Berlusconi alliance was finalized just over a week ago, sources familiar with the nerotiations said, after occasionally vitriolic negotiations. It was not announced until last Monday and, in its first report on the consortium on Tuesday, Le Figaro did not mention Mr. Berlusconi's participation.

The combination of Mr. Hersant and Mr. Berlusconi is what French commentators call a "solution coha-

This is drawn from the popular term cohabitation used to describe the power-sharing between Mr. Mitterrand and his Gaullist prime minister, Jacques Chirac, who was appointed after the March 16 elec-

The participation of Mr. Hersant is destined to please Mr. Chirac, while retaining Mr. Bertusconi will save face for Mr. Mitterrand, commentators said. The communications commission, theoretically an independent body, has until Feb. 24 to decide which group will take over La Cinq.

It will also announce the new oper-ator of the sixth channel, TV6, a rock station.

The two bidders for La Cinq have given bulky prospectuses with detailed financial analyses and proposals for the station. The commission's deliberations are secret. Both Mr. Hersant and Sir James, the publisher of the conservative French weekly L'Express, have said that they would introduce a large news content to a channel that currently has none. The forthright Mr. Hersant, 67, is a man who excites passions among the French, particularly on the left. One source who knows him de scribed him as being "of the hard, old-fashioned right."

He surprised the staff of La Cinq by making an unannounced inspec-tion of the station's studios several days before his bid became official. "It was an example of the abruptness, the arrogance of his style," said a journalist who used to be one of his employees.

One of the reasons for the controversy surrounding Mr. Hersant dates from World War II.

In 1940, Mr. Hersant, who had been a member of a Socialist youth group, joined Jenne Front, another youth organization set up by the collaborationist government after the Nazis occupied France, After the war, Mr. Hersant was tried for his activities and served a one-month prison term. Subsequent amnesties removed the rulings from his record.

Last March, he was elected to the National Assembly for the Gaullist Rally for the Republic.

Mr. Hersant has built up a French press empire with 38 percent of national and 20 percent of provincial newspaper circulation. He started in 1950 with his first publication, L'Auto Journal. Now he has Le Figaro, France-Soir and Paris-Turf, a racing paper, a series of periodicals and provincial oews-papers, interests in 30 radio stations, nine printing plants and an advertising agency.

Salomon Electronics Cut the Paper out of Commercial Paper

By Carl Gewirtz

International Herald Tribune
PARIS — Salomon Brothers, the big Wall Street investment bank, has declared war on its competitors for a larger slice of the commercial paper market, the fastest-growing sector of the international capital market.

With an increasing number of U.S. companies establishing Euro-CP programs specifically directed at investors outside the United States, Salomon announced plans last week for the global distribution of such short-term debt electroni-

Under its system, no paper will change hands. Cedel, one of the two clearing systems used in the Europond market, will do the bookkeeping and Citibank's Global Treasury Management System will handle payments. The entire process of issning, delivering, clearing and settling trades will be done on computers, eliminating much paperwork and thereby reducing costs, according to Daniel Benton, the Salomon vice president responsible for the plan. He said that should eliminate the need for U.S. companies to set up separate Euro-CP programs since paper for any maturity in any currency could be created instantly to suit issuers' needs and investors' preferences.

Salomon's competitors are not impressed. They maintain that the international distribution of Euro-CP is already largely done electronically and that the plan is simply a girmlick to enhance Salomoo's reliquid assets at hand to redeem massimals result in the plan is simply a girmlick to enhance Salomoo's reliquid assets at hand to redeem massimals result in the control of atively small share of the domestic turing paper if it cannot be rolled and international CP markets. — holding paper issued by companies until buyers are found. Outside the United States, units of Ciucorp, Morgan Guaranty, Bankers Trust and Bank of America vie on an equal footing with investment banks.

Equally threatened are the for-eign banks active in the international market, such as Swiss Bank Corp., Credit Suisse First Boston, County Nat West and Samuel Montagu, who play no role in the do-mestic U.S. market. These competitors argue that almost all of the U.S. companies tapping the international market for-bid the sale of their paper to domestic U.S. investors, which is taken as proof that issuers perceive the markets to be quite different. The major difference is that U.S. investors prefer paper maturing in 30 days or less and international investors prefer three months and longer.

There are other important differences. In the U.S. market, issuers were simply unwilling to buy such long-dated paper. This was the same problem that

Treasury Prices Dip While Short-Term Rates Hold

By Michael Quint New York Times Service

NEW YORK - Treasury note and bond prices drifted lower Friday, but short-term interest rates were little changed as activity sub-sided before a holiday weekend.

Securities dealers and economists concluded that the statistics released Friday on producer prices and factory output were about what they had expected and did not yield much evidence to suggest higher or lower interest rates.

The inflation rate rose m January, with higher prices for oil and gasoline helping to raise producer prices by six-tenths of a percentage point. The rise of 0.4 percent for down 9/32, to yield 7.26 percent.

Kidder May Face Lawsuits, Huge Penalty

By Tamar Lewin New York Times Service

NEW YORK — Kidder, Pezbody & Co. mzy face a host of lawsuits and financial penalties as a result of insider trading charges against its employees, corporate lawyers say.

Under the Insider Trading Sanctions Act of 1984, those who trade on inside information can be made to give back their illegal profits, and pay a penalty of three times as much as their illegal activities produced.

"What's the company's potential liability?" said Harvey Goldschmid, who teaches corporate law at Columbia Law School. "A lot more than it made." The federal court complaints filed Thursday and Friday charge that Kidder made millions of dollars in illegal profits by trading on confidential infor-mation exchanged by Martin A. Siegel, the former head of Kidder's mergers and acquisition department; Richard B. Wigton, head of Kidder's risk-arbitrage unit; Timothy L. Tabor, formerly the second-ranking executive in Kidder's arbitrage unit, and Robert M. Freeman, head of stock arbi-trage at Goldman, Sachs & Co.

Sachs & Co.; Richard B. Wigton,

Normally, the 1984 sanctions would apply only to the individuals involved. But because three of the four men charged with insider trading this week had been high-level employees directly responsible for Kidder's arbitrage activities, most securities lawyers believe it will be difficult for Kidder to escape liability, especially if the profits went into the firm's accounts.

Kidder has not been charged with any wrongdoing, and a spokesman said that the firm had no comment on its liability.

"If a company tells its truck driver to stay within the speed limit, but he drives 75 mph and runs someone over," said one lawyer who asked not to be named, "the company's still liable, because it was a foresceable outgrowth of his duties. That's the analogy here." The investment banks involved may also face regulatory complaints for failure to supervise their mployees. Private lawsuits also may be filed by clients who provided the confidential information that was used for trading, and by investors whose trades were affected by the insider activities.

Sachs & Co.; Richard B. Wigton, head of Kidder's risk-arbitrage unit, and Thnothy L. Tabor, for-tives concede, but few firms have

NEW YORK — In the fourth quarter, the nation's biggest commercial banking companies were plagued by continued weakness in lending, a decline in investmentbanking income and a disturbingly high level of special items. As a result, the year turned out to be one of the harshest for the banks since deregulation began in the late 1970s. "The industry is just not earning well," said Stephen Berman, a banking analyst at Nomura Securities Inc.

Most analysts are only marginally optimistic about the outlook for 1987. Even though the large banking concerns are expected to push harder to expand overseas and to win the right to underwrite securities, analysts see no slowdown in the exodus of large corporate borrowers from the banking system.

They see no end to the debt problems of developing nations. They believe that rents on commercial real estate, which banks depend upon for repayment of development loans, will fall further. And they question whether fee-important source of bank revenue, will lift earnings. The consensus is that the banks' financial condition will improve marginally, at best, or remain unbased businesses, an increasingly icely. They also note that the banks

Holyfield Keeps Crown

RENO, Nevada — Evander Holyfield retained his World Boxing Association junior heavyweight title Saturday with a seventh-round knockout of his former U.S.

Olympic teammate, Heary Tillman.

Holyfield, who is 14-0 with 10 knockouts, knocked Tillman down four times three in the final round. He has not lost since a foreign referee disqualified him in the semifinal round of the 1984 Los Angeles Olympic Games for a controversial punch on a break.

The only round in which the bout's result was in question was the first. Holyfield knocked Tillman down with a right-left combination 15 seconds into the second round. Tillman was up at the count of eight by the referee, Carlos Padilla, but he struggled the rest of the round and nearly went down again when Holyfield landed one of his many stinging right uppercuts.

Holyfield put his opponent against the ropes in the third and fourth rounds. In the fourth, he was especially effective and Tillman's famed left jab was not evident. Tillman was a stationary target in the fifth round, and Holyfield had him staggering after another right-left.

In the seventh round, a left-right followed by an appearant put Tillman down for the first time and he was up at the count of eight. Seconds later, Holyfield's powerful right in Tillman's comer brought the second knockdown of the round. Tillman got up at nine, but it took less than that number of seconds for Holyfield to end the bout with a thundering left. Padilla invoked the three-knockdown rule and stopped the bout at 1:43 of the round.

Holyfield, who won the 190-pound (86-kilogram) crown from Dwight Muhammad Qawi last summer, was defending for the first time. Tillman, who defeated Willie de Wit for the Olympic gold medal in the eavyweight division, fell to a record of 14-2.

"I'm still Henry's friend," Holyfield said before the lighters embraced at a news conference after the fight, the first pro bout involving 1984 U.S. Olympic teammates. "I had something to prove - that I'm a chan

NEW YORK — Dwight Gooden is on pro-bation for three years after having pleaded no contest to two felony charges: violently resisting arrest and battery on a police officer in Tampa, Florida. His former francée, Carlene Pearson, was accessed two weeks ago for carry ing a loaded two shot derringer at La Guardia Airport, where she was to meet the New York Met right-hander for a reported reconciliation. Darryl Strawberry is separated from his wife, Lisa, who has charged the Met outfielder with violent behavior and breaking her nose. Ron Darling and Tim Tenfel are on probation for one year each after the right-ha pitcher and second baseman pleaded no contest to two misdemeanor charges of resisting arrest in a scuffle last season with off-duty policemen employed as security guards at a Houston nightspot. Misdemeanor charges were dis-missed against Bob Ojeda and Rick Agnilera, two other pitchers who had tried to help their Catcher Gary Carter will be questioned in New York State Supreme Court next month regarding his connection to a suspected illegal vitamin scam by a Texas company.

And so the Mets, who when last seen in uniform were spraying champagne as baseball's best team, will open spring training this week as baseball's most notorious. As such, they will be subjected to the obvious dogout humor. Instead of a starting rotation, the Mets now have a starting probation. Their young left-hander, Sid Fernandez, couldn't even get himself arrested. And somebody will surely ask Darryl Strawberry when he stopped beating his wife.

But among baseball players, such jokes tend to condone the problem rather than solve it. And that's the Mets' real problem now.

The team will be trying to accomplish what no baseball franchise since the Yankees of 1977 and 1978 has done — repeat as World Series champions. And only the Mets can answer the the players' sides of the stories. But that's not the point. The point is, such behavior must cease if the Mets are to carry themselves like champions. It's not easy for a competitive young athlete big question: Were their off-the-field headlines to walk away from a dispute. By nature, he is geared to trying to win — a game or an argument with a policemen. After the events of the merely a coincidental series of isolated incidents, or were they a symptom of too much too

Manager Frank Cashen, Manager Dave Johnson and the players themselves are on the spot

dent for baseball operations. "And by opening day, Strawberry will be 25, only a few years past Namually, the front office prefers to believe college age."

But Gooden and Strawberry have never attended college, where a sense of more mature behavior might have rabbed off. And with their million-dollar salaries, they don't see any rea-son to anend college. But they might now be inclined to pay even more attention to the New York psychologist the Mets quietly employ.

"He's related well to a few players," McIlvaine said. "But some have resisted him." Around the clubhouse, Gooden and Strawberry appear to be pleasant, polite and well mannered. But judging by the headlines that have emerged from their private lives, they are not always that way. Long before his domestic separation, Shawberry separated from Johnson after the manager removed him from Game 6 of the World Series in a math-iming double switch. "I don't want to talk to him," Strawberry snapped later. "He can go his way and I can go my way."

In Game 7. Strawberry hit a home run in an 8-5 triumph. On returning to the dugout be slapped hands with Johnson after a word at home plate from Ray Knight, the now-departed home plate from Ray Knight, the now-departed third basema. But when the Mets gathered Saturday in St. Petersburg, Florida, for their first workout, Strawberry needed to reconcile his relationship with the manager.

Knight obviously made a financial mistake in spurning the Mets' $800,000 offer while demanding $1 million. He has joined the Baltimore Orioles for about $500,000. But now that the Mets are without a descendable third have. the Mets are without a dependable third baseman, they might have made an even bigger mistake in letting Knight get away.

In that moment at home plate, Strawberry listened to Knight and accepted his advice. And after all the headlines of the last few months, Gooden, Strawberry and several other Mets need to listen to somebody who can tell them how to carry themselves like champions.

would determine the trend in coming weeks.

Frankfurt

The Frankfurt stock exchange showed modcrate gains last week, overcoming a weak start.
As the dollar stabilized, orders intensified and led to an increase of 5 percent over the previous Friday, when the Commerzbank index fell to its lowest level in 18 months.

The index gained 27.8 points last week to finish at 1,761.1. Department stores were among the leading gamers, with Karstadt imming 40 Deutsche marks to 470 and Horten gaining 11 DM to end the week at 231. Automobiles, by contrast, were generally weaker, as BMW fell 60 pfennigs and Daimler fell 6 DM. The exception was Volkswagen, which gained 7 DM to 348.50.

Hong Kong

The Hang Seng index surged to new heights last week, mainly on rampant buying by over-seas institutions, before settling at a healthy 2,740.49 Friday, up 66.92 points from the pre-

Average daily volume was 1.5 billion Hong Kong dollars, up from the previous week's daily average of 1.27 billion. The market opened strongly Monday and heavy selective buying soon helped push the barometer past the 2,700-mark for the first time.

London

Share prices remained buoyant last week on the London Stock Exchange, despite several bouts of profit-taking in line with Wall Street.

The Financial Times industrial share index reached a new all-time high of 1,521 points on Friday, closing 12.1 points higher for the week. The number of transactions rose from 210,039 to 228 149 to 228,149. The optin sm was underpinned by widespread predictions of a cut in personal taxation in the budget to be announced next month, as well as the successful market debut of British Alivays on Wednesday.

Rumons of new insider-trading cases after the arrest of three Wall Street investment bankers caused a brief shakeout. But shares quickly resumed their upward trend, encour-aged by an optimistic Bank of England report. Hopes of a new consumer boom under-pinned leading stores, while strong gains were noted for banks and insurances ahead of their reporting seasons.

Milan

The Milan stock market failed last week to shrug off a downward trend that has dogged it since the start of the year.

Market barometers drifted downward by 1.8

percent from the previous week after four neg-ative sessions, although trading was slightly more buoyant. A total of 156 million shares changed hands, up from 133 million the previ-

The Comit Index closed at 692.40 points after the previous week's close of 705.11. Industrials lost the most ground. Fiat lost 3.9 percent, Montedison 3.2 percent and Olivetti, 3.9 percent.

Volume, too, hit a new high for a single day, with 63.28 million units changing hands. The previous record high of 55.5 million units was posted late last year.

The index gained another 3.54 points on Friday to close at 1,016.52 points. Market observers attributed the trend to prolonged confidence on the trading floor after bouts of late last year.

In the industrial and commercial sector,

Multi Purpose Holdings picked up 14 cents to 7.25. But the glamour was in the finance sector, where trading was heavy.

Tokyo

Share prices suffered a moderate setback on the Tokyo stock market last week amid com-motion caused by the listing Monday of Nip-pon Telegraph & Telephone Corp. stock. The 225-blue chip Nikkei stock average, which fell 339.52 yen the previous week, gave up 39.96 yen to close at 19,628.87 yen Friday. The market was closed Wednesday for a national holiday and Saturday for a regular monthly business recess.

Average daily trading volume fell to 1.02 billion shares from 1.15 billion. But the average value of volume rose to 932.68 billion yen a day, up from 880.78 billion, because of the demand for NTT stock.

General trading focused throughout the week on giant-capital stocks and issues related to the fight against the Acquired limmune Deficiency Syndrome.

Zurich

Trading on the Zurich stock exchange was calm last week in response to a more stable dollar. Participation by foreign investors was generally reduced.

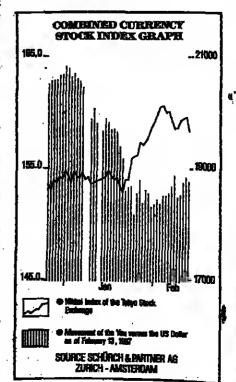

The Credit Suisse index dropped to 540.5 points Friday from 541.9 at the close of trading he previous week. By contrast, the Societé de Banque Suisse index rose to 647.7 from 644.5.

Market observers said that the dollar, which turned firmer late in the week, would set the tone for trading in the coming week.

Banks were well supported, notably Societé de Banque Suisse, which gained 8 Swiss francs to finish at 511. Finance companies were also stronger, with OerlikonBuchrle bearer shares climbing 10 francs to 1,220.

Soviets Win Hockey Finale

OUEBEC CITY - The Soviet Union, playing on foreign ice with a National Hockey League referee. defeated the NHL all-stars, 5-3, here Friday night to become cochampions of the Rendezvous 87

After the NHL won the opener. with a Soviet referee and with the Soviets having the right to final player changes during stoppages, many felt the NHL would sweep the two-garoe series. But Valery Kamensky and Vladimir Krutov each scored twice and goaltender Evgeny Belosheikin stopped 28 shots as the Soviets upped the tempo and won.

Much of the period was played at high speed, with the Edmonton contingent getting numerous scoring chances but unable to produce the tying goal.

Belosheikin, seemingly gaining confidence, turned back tough shots by Glenn Anderson twice, Gretzky, Esa Tikkanen and Messier. He also got a few breaks, as Kurri was wide on two deflections. Mario Lemieux tried to jam the puck from behind, but sent it sliding through the crease and out of harm's way. Meanwhile, Rick Green of Mon-

Merger of Styles and Esteem

By Malcolm Moran

New York Times Service QUEBEC CITY -In the end, there was the sight of Valery Ka-mensky, the 20-year-old center and leader of the new generation of hockey talent in the Soviet Union, manufacturing a goal with a brilliant individual effort once considered uncharacteristic of his team's precise, group-oriented style.

And there was Mikhail Tatarinov, the rugged 20-year-old de-fenseman, using his body to disrupt plays cleanly but forcibly, a technique North American play-ers bave used — and abused for decades.

And then there was, among the National Hockey League allstars, the delegation from the Edmonton Oilers that used circular, European-style routes in a region that has long believed that the shortest distance between two points is a straight line up and down your wing.
A decade and a half into the respectfully intense relationship between the NHL and the Soviet Union, the two sides continue to show a more frequent merging of styles. Once, the two approaches the ric-tac-toe pattern of the Soviet team and the power-ori-ensed North American attack --were clearly and passionately defined opposites.

Last week's two-game Rendezvous '87 series demonstrated again that the urgency of national pride has caused the two sides to elevate each other's level of play. The two powers shared more than one victory each in the two games.

"It's important that you know the National Hockey League didn') win the series, and neither did we." said Viktor Tikhonov, the coach of the Sovies team. "What won was hockey itself. I think both games were a holiday."

The Soviet yearn exhibited flashes of unusual brilliance. "They were making some great individual plays," said Rod Langway, the Washington de-fenseman whose careful play was central to the NHL victory in Game 1. "The goals they were talen) goals. The NHL earned the reassurance that even with two days of preparation and despite injuries to significant players, an approach of intelligent, restrained aggressiveness can beat anyone.

"I learned a lot about hockey." said Dave Poulin of Philadelphia, whose deflection produced the decisive goal in the opener, "You learn what you're capable of when you're elevated to heights. . . . We were given a challenge to do this, and I think we answered the challenge nicely."

Nearly 15 years after the flag-waving tension of the eight-game Summir Series in 1972, the two sides enjoyed a peaceful coexis-tence. "The important thing." Tikhonov said, "whether you play two, five, eight or 10 games. i's proven as fact that what you saw was a real party. We should keep on having is."

"They've got my phone num-ber," Gretzky said. "They can phone me and I'll come and play. I've got lots of friends on that

After the first run. Majerhofer led with an 0.22-second advantage over Schmidhauser. With the snow falling less beavily, the Swiss ripped through the second course, flagged with 59 gates over the 465foot (141-meter) drop, Starting before Maierhofer, Schmidhauser seemed to lose control at least once and skied some gates wide. But the Austrian faltered when it was ber turn and lost the entire lead on the top part of the course.

It was Schmidhauser's second victory of the winter after she took the opening slalom at Park City, Utah. Her triumph was the 16th for the Swiss women in 22 cup races so far this season.

The race was the ninth and nextwith 97 points. Schmidhauser, 22, to-last slalom of the season.

Schneider Wins Back-to-Back Races; Stenmark Takes His 40th Cup Slalom

Compiled by Our Staff From Dispatches
SAINT GERVAIS, France — Vreni Schneider of Switzerland won her second World Cup ski race in two days Saturday when she came back from 10th place after Monika Hess, Switzerland, 1:37.62.

WOMEN'S SLALOM
(At Fluebil, Switzerland)
Carlone Schmidhauser, Switzerland, the first run to win a slalom. The two victories in the Mont 2. Monika Agierhoter, Austria, 1:31,59,
1. Erika Hess. Switzerland, 1:31,92,
4. Raswitho Steiner, Austria, 1:31,95,
5. Christine von Gruenigen, Switzerland, Blanc region of the French Alps gave Schneider the lead in women's overall cup standings with 230 points, one more than compatriot Maria Walliser. 7. Blance Pernandez, Ochoo, Spain, 1:32.50. Meanwhile, in Markstein, France, Ingemar Stenmark cut his way through a thick fog for a narrow slalom victory, his second of the season and the 40th slalom triumph of his 13-year cup career. Overall, it was the 85th cup event that the 30year-old Stenmark has won. He nipped Armin Bittner of West Germany by .08 second in two runs over the 1-mile (1,620meter) course at the Alsatian resort. Stenmark's total time was I minute, 36.39 seconds.

Schneider, 22, who won a giant sialom Friday at Megève, near Saint Gervais, was 10th on the 58gate first run with a time of 48.37. She finished first on the 60-gate second run in 47.78 to win with an aggregate of 1:36.15. Switzerland's Corinne Schmidhauser, who tore her upper lip on a gate during the first run, was second in 1:36.79. Americas Laopee CHICAGO—Signed Joon Agosto, pitcher, to a contract with the Howoll Islanders of the Pacific Cost Laopus.

NEW YORK—Signed Rick Cerone, catcher, The thin, soft snow on the twin Taguv courses gave a clear advantage to the first 10 skiers to come down on each run. The first course was already chopped up when Schneider came down, but she had a better starting position and better snow on the second. "There was nothing to lose," she said of her second run. "There was nothing else left for me to do but to go flat out I didn't ski well in the first." Schneider has won five times this season, including the world giantslalom championship. Asked whether she could win the overall cup title, she said, "I don't think so. There are three more downhills and two super-giants, which should favor Walliser." Stenmark's victory at Markstein brought him within one point of the cup slalom leader, Bojan Krizaj of Yugoslavia, who finished eighth. Krizaj has 97 points, Stenmark 96 and Bittner 74. Stenmark has won the cup slalom title eight times. Light snow was falling when the first run began, but midway through it the snow changed to light rain, then drizzle; the ensuing dense fog helped give the Swede the advantage. Some skiers said the snow was too soft, while others complained about the lack of visibility on the flat course, which dropped only 508 feet (154.2 meters), just over the 150-meter minimum.

"The visibility for me was not a problem," Stenmark said. "This hill is like the one where I learned

SPORTS BRIEFS

MOSCOW (Combined Dispatches) — Igor Lotorev of the Soviet Union ran the 1,000 meters Saturday in 2 minutes, 18 seconds, a world indoor best, Tass reported.

meet, the news agency said. The previous mark of 2:18.58 was set by Sebastian Coe of Britain in Oslo on March 19, 1983.

In Sofia, Yordanka Donkova of Bulgaria set a world indoor best of 7.74 seconds for the women's 60-meter hurdles during Saturday's national indoor track championships. The old mark, 7.75 seconds, was set by Bettina Jahn of East Germany on March 5, 1983.

In East Rutherford, New Jersey, men's and women's world bests for the 1,500-meter walk were set Saturday night at the U.S. Olympic Invitational meet. Tim Lewis clocked 5:17.17, shattering the 5:22.7 set by Martin Toporek of Austria in 1983. Maryanne Torrellas's 6:01.16 im-meters) away, scored a double-eagle 2 on the 499-yard 18th and finished at 65 for the day and 201 for three rounds. Edwards was tied with George Burns, Bobby Wadkins, Lon Hinkle, Lennie Clements and Bob Lohr.

Floyd and Snead shot 6-under-par 66s on the South course at Torrey Pines for totals of 199. David Edwards, using a driver from 241 yards (220.3

HEERENVEEN, Netherlands (AP) — Soviet speedskater Nikolai Gulyaev on Sunday broke the world record for 1,500 meters by clocking 1 minute, 52.70 seconds at the men's world championships. Gulyaev bettered the mark of 1:53.10, set minutes before by companiot Viktor Shasherin. Norwegian Geir Karlstad's 14:03.92 in the 10,000 lowered the world-record 14:11.63 set earlier in the day by Dutchman Leo Visser. On Saturday, Visser broke the 5,000 record by clocking 6:47.01, which lowered the mark of 6:49.15, set by Shasherin in March 1984.

The English Stately Dog

By Polly Devlin

LONDON — The cover of "The English Dog at Home" — a book that has somewhat unexpectedly made Britain's best-seller lists - is graced with a noble portico, dwarfed by a Great Dane belonging to the book's author, Felicity Wigan. Inside there is more of Chutney, couchant among tapestries and fine rugs, as are most of this colorful volume's dogs, save for Princess Anne's rough beast. He lies on a magnificent tapestry-covered chair in the flag-stoned hall of Gatcombe, her country house. For these are the dogs of the more-or-less stately homes of England, and these mutts lead the life of Riley. Most homes have more than one. There is Lavinia, duchess of Norfolk, for example. She lives with Muffin, Mishka, Mufti, Molly, Mitzi, Millie, Mumbo, Bessie and Lara. By now they have evolved among themselves a new hreed of dog, and right little hoodlums they look the lot of them.

Fortunately the duchess, mar-ried to the head of the Norfolk family, first in the English peerage for 500 years, lives in a large house. Most of the people in this book do, including the author and the photographer Geoffrey Shakerley. But I tell a lie. The owners live in the small spaces of large houses, the dogs take up the rest.

Lavinia Norfolk is a dog's best friend. She has organized a dog sanctuary, and heads the local branch of the Royal Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Animals. All her dogs are charity workers. Their good works consist, in the true Lady Bountiful tradition, of befriending other dogs less fortunate than themselves. Let the duchess explain: "Invitations are sent out to the 'friends' every year for a party at Arundel Cricket Ground (dress collar and lead) and they are allowed to bring their two-legged parents," The more you read this book the deeper you get into that twi-light, fantastic world of fanatics, mystics and obsessives lurking under the best disguise in the world - that of the English Gentlewoman. Under the twinsets and pearls are a bunch of mad women, almost literally barking. There is Mrs. John Menzies, whose basset hounds, Henry and Basil, have their own house in the garden with roses around the door, which sports a brass fox's mask and brush knocker, and a basset flap through which Mrs. Menzies crawled backwards and forwards to give Basil the confipulling down the blinds in the drawing room. A fascinated crowd has been known in gather in the street below to see the little hairy cairn dangling halfway down a large window holding onto the pull cord. Mrs. Metcalfe has consulted Mr. Phido, a dog psychiatrist.

Or there is Blob, Mrs. Robert Ducas's German pointer. He has sent 12 people to the hospital, and Mrs. Ducas keeps several track suits handy. "If someone has their clothes ripped from their body 1 can quickly rush them into a track

None of these women look certifiable, in fact they seem handsomely formidable and their houses are filled with the accoutrements of the English gentry. But in other countries these houses and their treasures would be protected from the ravages of such wild beasts. It would be un- Sir Rupert Buchanan-Jardine thinkable for a French or Italian duchess to grieve as wildly as the the breed from a mixture of Loudon Constantines's Sheltie sheepdog is partial to furniture made before 1700: "He is very discriminating about the walnut period. The William and Mary half legs in the hall."

Every page reveals the ravages of these things called pets, but not, as you might expect, the tolcrance, forebearance and patience of the good ladies and gentiemen who shelter them. Such virtues are not among their attributes. The words we need are hysterical devotion, adoration, enchantment, utter forgiveness. Witness Baronet Sir John Wiggin, who lives in Honington Hall, a 17th-century country house. Among his animals was Bryan, half-ferret, half-polecat, who lived in his trousers. Visitors to Honington would sometimes be stricken even unto silence by the sight of Sir John's waistband and thirt on the move. Once Bryan was missing, "I was heartbroken, did not put an advert in the Times for three days in case he returned, which was very lucky as he had gone to sleep in the dovecote after sucking the blood from three ducks." Since Bryan has gone to the great rabbit-hole in the sky, Sir John and Lady Wiggin console themselves with Sonia, Pinky, Muppet, Alexander, Toya, Buster, Figaro and Zola Budd, the last so-named because she ran fastest to her feed. Sir John acquired his first two Dachshunds during the war, starving among the ruins of Wup-pertal. His orderly fed them with a fountain pen filler for two months. Sir John wanted to call them Kraut and Saverkraut but no fraternization was allowed in 1944, so they ended up as Pork

Her English ancestors have names like Taffeta, Tatler, Radiant, Radium and Ravish, which sound much like the names of any English human nursery. Princess Anne has, of course, a corgi, the necessary familiar of the royal family, members of which swell up and turn black if corgis are ont of their sight. The queen also has her own family breed, a cross between corgis and Princess Margaret's dachshund. They are called dorgis, God's truth, No matter how outrageous, beguiling or bughouse any of these dogs are they don't begin to whose father, Sir John, formed match their owners. "There are wife's dachshund, Beaufort, "and Beaufort is guilty of all of them." Sir John Wiggin (of ferret fame) mourns the demise of their Sherry-Boo, "Her breath was pure anaesthetic. It sent us to sleep immediately, we've never slept so well since the Great Resper took her." The whole book is ravishingly silly and is the latest in a series of equally foolish and desirable volumes called the English this, that or the other. The revealing difference is that this one looks as though it will ontsell all the oth-

Mr. Bonaprop and the Fat Singer

By William Safire

WASHINGTON — A malapropism is a word or phrase that is amusingly off the mark. For example, a recent pamphlet circulated by the U.S. Department of Health and Human Services dealt with "inpatients" but stated that "hospital insurance covers impanient hospital care." (Inpatient is a retronym based on outpatient; used to be, a person receiving treatment in a hospital was merely a patient, and only the hatchet-faced head nurse was impatient.)

The eponymous -ism was formed from "Mrs. Malaprop," a character in a 1775 play by Richard Brinsley Sheridan who used reprehend for apprehend and oracular for vernacular. Today, the word applies to any goofy linguistic mistake, like the unintentional irreverence in the simile "drunk as the Lord."

Sheridan formed the name from malapropos, originally meaning "inopportune, unseasonable." The French formed the term from mal, "bedly"; à, "to"; propos, "the purpose." This idea is expressed in English as inappropriate.

Which brings us to bonapropium, a coinage to de-scribe happy mistakes: words or phrases that are seemingly off the mark, but unintentionally hit the mark right on the button.

For example, a disc jockey in Los Angeles named April Whitney who posed seductively in Playboy magazine reported her reaction to a subsequent invitation to fly to Dallas: "I'd be worried that I'd get off the plane and never be seen from again." Her comment appears to be a garbling of "heard from again," but the visual element of the story leads Don Shannon of the Los Angeles Times to suggest, "Mrs. Whitney may be the long-sought replacement for Sam Goldwyn, somebody who gets it wrong but with just a fraction of something that sounds right."

Goldwyn, the Hollywood producer, was famed for the mistakes created for him by the press agent Lynn Farnol, such as "A verbal contract isn't worth the paper it's written on" and "Include me out." In later years, Goldwyn decided he wanted a more statesmanlike image, fired his press agent and claimed he never said any of those things. That left a void: who would become "Mr. Bonaprop." the person who would be a natural source for the attribution of such

Casey Stengel, the baseball manager, filled that role for a time — he is usually cited as the source of the Thurberism "You could look it up." Walt Kelly's cartoon character Pogo was heavily quoted for "We have met the enemy and he is us," but this was his only major contribution to the language. The real person in our time who is most often credited with, or stuck with, bonapropisms is the former Yankee star Lawrence (Yogi) Berra.

I have long been searching for the origin of "The opera ain't over till the fat lady sings." Coach Dick Motta of the Chicago Bulls, who popularized the phrase in 1978, has been noted as a possible corner, but Daniel S. Knight of Philadelphia, who styles himself spokesman for the "Fat Lady Sings Society," cites the Concise Oxford Dictionary of Proverbs; In 1975, Ralph Carpenter, information director of Texas Tech, told a contingent of sportswriters in the Austin press box that "The rodeo ain't over till the bull riders ride." Dan Cook, a sports editor for The San Antonio Express-News, responded with "The opera ain't over

Expression of the origin of this gem, I came across the simpler and even more frequently cited "It ain" over till it's over," which I presume is a shortening of "The ball game iso" over until the last man is out."

Did Yog, Berra actually say that? Reached at his Montclair, New Jersey, home, Berra acknowledges the coinage: "Yes, I said that. It was during a pennant race for the Mets."

And what about "Thank you for making this night has about "Thank you for making this night has a shortening of necessary for possible the coinage."

otherwise insipid statement. "Yes, I said that too," confirms Berra, "in St. Louis." Such pimpoint sourcing of proverbial statements is as rare as it is useful to lexicographers yet unborn.

What about the recent "It's dejà vu all over again," so often attributed to Berra? "Nope, not true, I never said, that." Or the advice, "Always go to other people funerals — otherwise, they won't come to yours". That too is disclaimed; not an authentic bonaprop by

"That place is so crowded," Berra was supposed to have said, "that nobody goes there anymore." Properly sourced? "Yes, Yogi said that," said his wife, Carmen, on a telephone extension, "ahout a One bonapropism I have especially admired for its ultra-subjectivist, post-neo-deconstructivist quality, is not that of the Land-of-the-Nibilist critic Jucques Derrida, but of New Jersey's Yogi Berra: "H I hadn't woke up, I'd still be askep."

A HESITATE to quibble over what many would consider an inconsequential lapse," writes ferrold G. Weinberg of Norfolk, Virginia, "but feel constrained to do so by a lawyer's compulsion for precision and a loss of Virginia." love of Kipling."

My attorney friend is setting me straight on a misquoted reference here to "the Colonel's Lady and

Rosie O'Grady."

The character who is sister under the skin to the Colonel's Lady is Judy O'Grady, not Rosie, whom Weinberg cautiously identifies as "the subject and title of the 1890s song attributed to Maude Nugent." (Maude Nugent did write both the words and music of the song "Sweet Rosie O'Grady," copyrighted in 1896.)

Corrections of fact and grammar are received here with equanimity bordering on a kind of grim glee. The reason for this apparently masochistic trait is this: by ostentatiously wolfing down one slim slice of humble pie, I buy the license to take pops at everybody else for months without appearing to be a wiseguy. This particular correction from one of my equipoisoned pen pals, however, got to me. I have been inaccurately pairing the Colonel's Lady with the wrong O'Grady woman all my life — buildness of times in conversation, dozens of times in print. How many listeners or readers said to themselves, "He's got the poem mixed up with the song, but it a not for me to tell him what sort of jerk that makes him in my eyes.".

The repeated damage was done: it is now too late to thread my way back through life to fix that mistake.
